At the center of Sam Shepard's "Fool for Love" are two people whose hurts are so deep, whose angers are so real, that they can barely talk about what they really feel. That does not stop them from talking, on and on into the hurtful night, and eventually we can put together their stories, using what they have said, and especially what they have not said.

FOOL FOR LOVE. (1983). Sam Shepard. ****. I'm not sure why, but this play is often described as "a Western fantasy." The setting is a motel room somewhere in the West, and one of the principal characters is a rodeo performer, but, beyond that, the play could be set anywhere and still produce the same results on the audience.
